MORIN:

YES TO EDUCATION SURVEY

by Jennifer Robinson

Quebec has agreed to take part in a study of minority education rights in Canada, according to Quebec's Education Minister Jacques-Yvan Morin in a statement issued from the 28th meeting of the Council of Education Ministers in Edmonton.

The study follows a request from the nine anglophone provinces to investigate minority linguistic rights. At the St-Andrew conference this summer, the provincial premiers requested that the Education Ministers' Council study the state of French-language education in each province and prepare a report within six months.

Morin:
Let's make a deal

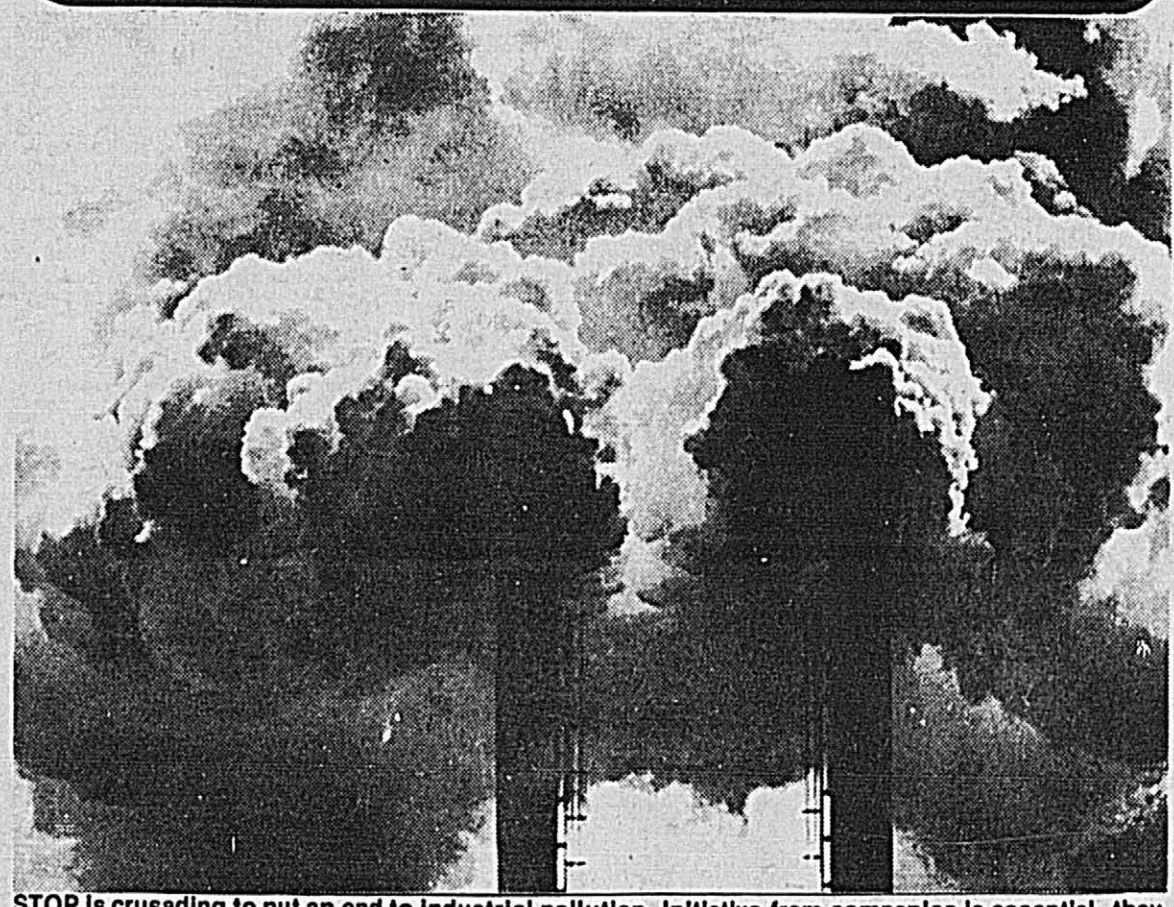
The request signed in August by all premiers except René Levesque stated that the provinces would earnestly attempt to provide instruction in English and French wherever numbers warrant.

New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield who chaired the St. Andrew's meeting referred to the study as an "important and urgent issue" and added that "the people of Quebec are asking the question: why should we extend language in English as we have so long to an English speaking minority, when the same right of facility is not extended fully outside the province of Quebec?"

From Edmonton, Morin said Monday that the survey will show "the lot of our English minority to be excellent. There are very few minorities in the world who have their own elementary and secondary school systems and three universities."

He added that participation by Quebec in the survey may lead to bilateral or multilateral agreements on the matter without changes in the British North America Act, thus leading to greater access to English schools for newcomers to the province from other parts of Canada.

Solutions which could lead to a broadening of admission criteria to English schools are more likely to result from agreements such as these than from constitutional amendments which Quebec has already rejected, Morin said.



STOP is crusading to put an end to industrial pollution. Initiative from companies is essential, they say.

Purifying law coming

by Owen Kurtin
and Jennifer Robinson

The Society to Overcome Pollution, STOP, is promoting the city's acceptance of a new air-purification by-law aimed at lowering the level of air pollution in St-Michel. However, "The law won't do much good if the companies don't show some initiative," according to STOP spokesperson Bruce Walker.

Walker was referring to Miron Ltd and Francon Ltd, limestone quarries and concrete and asphalt mixing plant in the area. He said that the existing by-law allows a suspended particle level of 80 micrograms per cubic metre, annular, a figure considered to be unhealthy.

Walker added that if the industrial companies would take some inexpensive measures to deal with the problem, such as wetting down the quarry beds to cut the level of fugitive dust emissions, and screening and filtering their smokestacks. the situation would not be as bad.

STOP's proposed by-law revises the SPL to 70 micrograms per cubic metre, an amount excessive to Ontario law which allows 60. "We have reason and confidence in the Montreal Urban Community to want a new air purification law," Walker said, however he expressed disappointment with the lack of interest demonstrated by City Councillors when less than 20 attended an open house at City Hall in July concerning provision and the intent of the by-law. The by-law will be voted on in early October.

STOP is also promoting public access to pollution emission data and information on all pollution laws. Ad hoc citizen committees, formed to deal with the problems of calcite dust and industrial smoke in the district, later joined STOP.

Alternatives Canada:

Academics prepared

by Rick Boychuk

The McGill Delegation to the Alternatives Canada Conference has been asked by conference co-ordinators to prepare a pro-federalist brief to balance pro-separatist papers that they requested other Quebec universities to draw up.

The seven students in the McGill group, chosen from the Departments of Political Science, History and Economics, have taken a "status quo won't do" position, according to spokesperson Daniel Ryan.

All the delegations have been asked to prepare briefs to be submitted two weeks prior to the conference, which is slated for mid-October in Toronto. The delegates were chosen by professors within the three departments according to two criteria: a thorough knowledge of the issues and a representation of the "milieu".

The conference, and Alternatives Canada itself, are the results of the efforts of a group of University of Toronto students who had drafted a proposal for a symposium on Canadian unity that would include students from across Canada. The group presented its proposition to University of Toronto President Dr. John Evans who sanctioned the idea and suggested it be scheduled to coincide with "Options", a U of T sponsored conference of Candian academics. Both Options and Alternatives Canada will discuss the question of the continued viability of Confederation.

Alternatives Canada chairperson Patrick Milloy, a graduate student at U of T, said in a telephone interview with the Daily on Monday that everybody contacted had been enthusiastic and co-operative. Milloy indicated that funding was coming from such diverse sources as the Secretary of State, U of T, City of Toronto, Carling-O'Keefe Breweries, and all the provincial governments except of Manitoba and Quebec.

The Quebec government, initially under the impression that the conference was to be solely pro-federalist, is reconsidering its decision not to provide funds. Ryan, also co-chairperson of all the Quebec delegations, claims that approximately 60% of the Quebec representatives are pro-separatist. Of the 175 students invited, 46 are Quebecers and 57 are Ontarians.

The delegates will be provided with transportation, food and lodging. The primary goals of the conference, stated Milloy, are to make university students aware of the problems confederation is facing and to get them involved in the national unity debate. The emphasis will be "academic rather than political". Speakers scheduled so far to address the symposium include David Lewis, Claude Ryan and Dr. John Evans.

Lots in store at Invitation

Today

by Janet Clarke

Beginning Friday, McGill will host "Invitation '77", its eighth triennial Open House weekend. The purpose of the event has always been to introduce parents and friends to the university, however this year, according to Mike Gardiner, the chairman of the organizing committee, the objective is "to introduce the McGill campus to the Montreal community at large".

In their efforts to make McGill more accessible to the city's population, the committee has planned continuous entertainment throughout the weekend. There will be concerts and dances, tours of the campus, the laboratories and the libraries will be open, a tent will be set up on the lower campus containing animals from the Macdonald College Farm, and another to serve beer to students and visitors. In addition to this, each of the individual departments will be offering their own tours and displays of everything from glass-blowing which will be demonstrated in the Chemistry Department, to a debate on national unity to be organized by the Political Science Department.

The official opening of McGill's "Invitation '77" will be Friday at noon, when Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will make an appearance. The ceremony, which will include a speech by Trudeau, will be held in front of the Arts Building or, in case of rain, inside Redpath Hall. After the ceremony, the Prime Minister intends to mingle with students on the Lower Campus.

After the opening, a concert will be held at the Strathcona Music Building at 1 pm with the "McGill Student Wind Ensemble", directed by Dr. Robert Gibson. At 4 pm the same afternoon, the Faculty of Management will be presenting a seminar on "The Role of Public Policy Today: A View from the House of Commons", in Room 151 of the Samuel Bronfman Building. The guest speaker will be the MP Herb Gray who will discuss the topic with Dr. Laurent Picard, former CBC President and Dr Donald Armstrong of the Faculty of Management. Friday evening at 7 pm the Political Science Department will present a debate on national unity — "Quebec or Canada, Are the Options the Same", Professor Dale Thompson meeting Professor Daniel Latouche, with moderator Eric Kelrans, in the Frank Dawson Adams Auditorium. There will, of course be your standard McGill rock concert on Friday evening. This concert, however will feature a Toronto rock group, the fifteen-piece "Bitter Blue" band. Tickets will be on sale at the Union box-office and at the door for $2.50. The main events on Saturday will be the McGill-Queen's football game, starting at 2 pm at Molson Stadium, and the "Invitation '77" Ball, featuring the swing-era sound of the "Moxie Whitney Band". The dance will be held at the Currie Gymnasium. The price of admission is $5.00, and tickets are available at the Union box-office or at the door. On Sunday, the Classics Department will have a slide presentation at 1 pm in room 219 of the Leacock Building, and at 2 pm there will be a Northern Studies film about Alaska in Burnside Hall, room B-45. Special Architectural and Historical tours will leave daily from in front of Redpath Hall at 10 am, 12, 2 and 4 pm. The student guides who have been assigned to these tours, have done extensive research in order to provide some interesting information while they lead the visitors through McGill's older buildings.

The displays will be open to the public, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday from 10 am to 5 pm. The organizing committee has issued a handbook which will have, in detail, a list of all the weekend's activities. So if you're sitting at home, doing nothing, and you feel like having a game of chess with a computer, or check your perception at the Psychology Department, McGill's "Invitation '77" encourages you to drop by.

Old McGill '78:
There will be a meeting of the Year Book staff tonight at 7:30 in the Old McGill office, B-18 in the basement of the Student Union Building. All interested photographers, writers, layout staff, artists etc., are welcome.

Ambar: Where repression and exploitation start at Home

Clinical employees at the Ambar Institute for the mentally retarded in Carillon, about 50 miles north of Montreal, have charged that living conditions at the 135-resident home are intolerable. They are planning to form a Movement for the Aid of the Mentally retarded.

The Quebec Federation of Labour (QFL)-affiliated employees have made public numerous grievances including the lack of an adequate fire alarm system and the total disrepair of rooms.

The 135 residents must share 5 cold-water showers, clothes and underwear. Meals are inadequate and residents are exploited by doing manual labour for an average weekly salary of 60 cents. About 90 of the residents are given medication which, according to the clinicians, repress them.

According to Educator Bernard Leroux, the money given to the institution by the provincial government is misused and "hidden in the director's pocket."

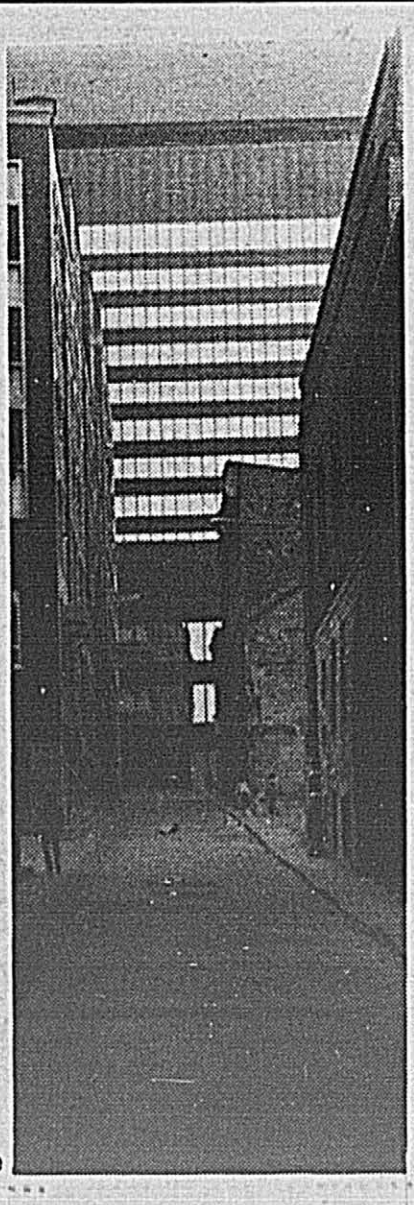
MUCTC mechanics' strike may paralyze transit system

According to Lawrence Hanigan, chairman of the MUC Transit Commission (MUCTC), commuters will face a shutdown of the metro and bus systems later this fall if the union that represents the commission's 2400 mechanics does not change its negotiating position.

"The demands made by the union would represent an additional cost to the commission of $18,000 per year per man more than we're already paying," says Hanigan. "We feel those demands are unreasonable, unrealistic and without foundation, and certainly if they maintain that attitude, it will be difficult to avoid a conflict."

The CNTU-affiliated union members have unanimously rejected the MUCTC's last wage proposal of 6%, calling the offer "an insult and a provocation."

The union is demanding a 44% salary increase which would give the MUCTC mechanics wage parity with their Vancouver counterparts. The highest salary in the MUCTC garage is $7.33 per hour, while senior mechanics in Vancouver earn $10.51 an hour. Despite the higher salaries in Vancouver, the MUCTC workers claim that tickets there are cheaper.



Man and his Deficit

Since 1968, Montrealers have paid $44 million into Man and His World's deficit and, according to the MCM, the time has come to devise a financial plan which will be equitable for the citizenry of Montreal.

Mayor Drapeau has, in the past, controlled M & HW-related documentation and the MCM stresses that public consultation would better alleviate the financial problems. The MCM is also arguing for the creation of a M&HW Board with representation from the provincial government, the municipal administration and the public.

Montreal may GO with $1.4 billion transit plan

Transport Minister Lucien Lessard has announced that he will begin immediate negotiations with railway officials to devise a commuter transit plan for the Montreal area. The result could be a system similar to Toronto's efficient GO system, which is considered a Canadian model in mass transit.

According to the Montreal Regional Transit Committee (MRTC) report, the modernization of the rail system and metro extension would cost $1.4 billion. The report calls for the expansion of the Metro east to Montreal north, further south to Longueil and north through St. Laurent.

Lessard has stated he is impressed by the report and both CN and CP have indicated they will support any plan to improve and speed up commuter service as long as the provincial government shares the operating deficit and the cost of new equipment.

Oil deposit discovered in St. Lawrence River

A $20,000 fine has been levelled against the owners of the Greek merchant ship Hellenic Ideal for having poured oil into the St. Lawrence River. The ship's crew members dumped 3250 gallons of used oil into the river when the vessel was anchored at the Port of Montreal. The $20,000 represents the largest fine ever imposed in such a case.

Comment

Drapeau seeks indulgences

For the next few evenings at City Hall, Montreal's municipal councillors will be turning their attention to the revision of the City Charter. The most significant charter amendment, which will be presented to the National Assembly for approval next month, will enable the city to tighten its control over residential demolition. Montreal will have the power to oblige firms to rebuild structures destroyed in illegal demolition.

The spirit of the regulation accords with MCM policy and many observers are baffled by the fact that the ruling Civic Party fully supports the amendment. But the Civic Party's sudden enlightenment goes beyond any concern it may have for residential districts.

With civic elections only a year away, the Drapeau administration is earnestly attempting to buy as many indulgences as it can, in order to dispel the hellish image the MCM will attempt to paint of Drapeau and his fallen angels during next fall's electoral campaign. It is significant that the Civic Party is also seeking to amend the charter so as to give it virtual censoring powers with respect to posters and leaflets during political campaigns.

The MCM is hoping that the Civic Party's bad karma will speak for itself. The administration's perenially inefficient labour relations are especially so this year. In their negotiations with the striking blue collar workers, with whom the city broke off talks on July 5th, the administration has been labelled "totally dishonest" by the union and "repressive" by the MCM. The administration may also paralyze the bus and metro systems later this fall by virtue of its unwillingness to negotiate with MUCTC mechanics. Both the blue collars and the mechanics are seeking parity with their counterparts in Toronto and Vancouver.

The Olympic fiasco will soon embarrass the mayor again when the particulars of the Olympic tax are made public this weekend. And the administration is making little headway in the management of the $44 million Man and His World deficit.

The MCM's wholehearted endorsement of the charter amendment on demolition by terming it a "great step forward" while de-emphasizing its belief that the move does not go far enough, is evidence that the MCM as well is preparing for next year's election. Known for its dislike of secrecy, the MCM recently banned the press from one of its Conseils Generals which, incidentally dealt with proposals for the party's electoral tactics in 1978.

For both the MCM and the Civic Party, "good deeds" in coming months will be synonymous with good results at the ballot box.

Letters

Not really a slash...

To the Daily:

In the light of two articles in the Daily regarding Radio McGill and the Women's Union, I would like to detail the budgetary allocation process for the readers.

To determine whether or not a club has received a "drastic budget cutback" one should not look at the original demands of a club for 1977-78, but rather at the grant the group received in 1976-77.

It is a misnomer to say that the radio station's budget of $20,000.00 was drastically slashed to $9,245.00. The $20,000.00 figure represents the request of Radio McGill for funds. Included in the request was a large and ambitious plan for expansion, but in no way can this amount be called the budget of the station, rather, it was a point from which to start negotiations on a subsidy amount.

It is not an unusual occurrence to find an organization requesting a large amount of funds from the Society in the hope that a good percentage will be authorized. However, until an amount is authorized by Students' Council, there is no budget in operation. Therefore, the only realistic way to compare budgets would be to view this year's budget in regards to last year's approved subsidy. When this is done, Radio McGill's budget can be seen as not having been cut from $20,000.00 to $9,200.00 but actually having been increased from $8,100.00 to $9,200.00.

The same type of analysis must be used for the Women's Union. When this is done, the figures read 1976-77 budget — $5,000.00, 1977-78 subsidy — $4,100.00. So while it is true that there is a budget cut, it is nowhere near the $5,000.00 cut represented in the Daily.

Phil Gertler
Treasurer

Ed note: One would think that the new Students' Council would not entirely base their policies on what happened during a year of trusteeship. (1976-77). In an effort to provide services to McGill students, the Students' Council should base their budgetary decisions on the actual needs of the organizations which provide the services.

If the Women's Union or Radio McGill or any other group for that matter requested a certain amount to provide more and better services than last year, then the value of those services should be examined by the Students' Council. This was not done. The decisions were based on "last year".

A point which Gertler omits when he "details the budgetary allocation process for the readers" is that only one quarter of the Students' Society budget is allocated to the groups that kept the Society alive after the University Senate walked in on a corrupt Society Executive in December 1975. This one-quarter was what was left after all the "fixed costs" were established.

Oh yeah?

To the Daily:

With reference to Mr. Gertler's comments regarding Radio McGill, I feel that a number of clarifications should be made.

First of all, we at Radio McGill do not submit budget demands. Rather, we requested a budget that we felt was necessary for us to be able to provide viable services to the students of this university.

An analysis of our budget of $9246 for this coming year will reveal over $4000 in expenses being made simply to recover stolen and damaged merchandise. This leaves us with only $5000 in actual money which can be applied to station operations for this year, and constitutes a cut.

Our request was based on a number of extraordinary factors. First, history. In the summer of 1975, Radio McGill was torn apart by officials of the Students' Society. A previous station manager submitted an estimate of $10,000 as the final cost of restoring Radio McGill to what it once was (a fully functioning radio station). However, when we sought this year to complete the refurbishing project, we were denied a special summer budget for this purpose, and were told that it would have to be included in our full year operating budget. Therefore, much of the money expended in 1977-78 cannot be utilized to enhance Radio, only to put it back on its feet.

Last year Radio McGill operated with a $7700 budget, of which only $900 was spent on station restoration. And that is why our service was not useful. This year, as of October 10, we will be in 14 campus locations, and will provide a better-sounding, more listenable signal. We also hope to offer our studios to all those persons interested in using what constitutes an excellent audio resource. The fact remains however, that until the rebuilding is completed, and this cannot be attained until more funds are fed in our direction, Radio McGill will be limited in its ability to serve the students of McGill, that aspect of our operation which we consider the most important. Without it, we'd be just another radio station.

Finally, our budget request was for $14,000, not $20,000. As our treasurer, it seems irresponsible of Mr. Gertler to manipulate figures for the sake of argument, as he did in his letter.

This picture demonstrates one of the reason's behind the phenomenal success of the Redmen football team this past Saturday: teamwork. Here, Rod Bell (70), Daniel Graham (63), and Jim Tryforos (36) converge on Concordia punter Mark Budness. Bell's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar imitation was extremely effective, as the big tight end rejected two Budness punts.

Field hockey off to rough start

by Richard C. Jablonski

The McGill women's field hockey team travelled to Vermont this past weekend for three games against opposition from American schools. The results of the trip were discouraging, as the Martlets dropped all three matches; losing on Saturday to Middlebury College and Castelton State College, and on Sunday to Johnson State College.

Team coach Jan Meyer cited "individual errors" and "defensive mistakes" as the primary factors in the three losses. In losing 5-3 to Middlebury on Saturday morning, McGill played well enough to win, but was the victim of a variety of poor breaks. As Meyer said, "The score was not indicative of the actual play. We had shots on goal and opportunities to win."

The losses to Castleton and Johnson, by scores of 3-0 and 3-1 respectively, were not entirely the fault of poor play on the part of McGill. "Both of those teams have very good goalies," Meyer remarked in reflecting on the latter two losses.

While the weekend might best be described as a washout, two players in particular enjoyed a fair degree of success. Inside forwards, Cathy Haig and Liz McGovern, each scored two goals in the three games, providing the team with its entire offensive production for the trip.

At this time, Meyer is preparing her team for this weekend's Ontario Women's Intercollegiate Athletics Association Earlybird Tournament, to be held this year in Sudbury, Ontario on the campus of Laurentian University. Other teams participating in the tournament include those representing Toronto, York, McMaster, Queen's, Waterloo, Guelph and Western. These teams, along with McGill, will compete for the Ontario championship later in the season.

Unfortunately, due to a lack of competition in this province, the women will play no more home games this season. The games remaining on McGill's regular season schedule will serve as a tuneup for the national championships, a tournament in which the team will compete regardless of its regular season record.

SportsNotes

REGISTRATION FOR KARATE

Contrary to that which was printed in the Daily, registration for the instructional athletics course in karate did not close last Thursday afternoon. Course instructor Richard Lovat, himself a black belt, needs more students if his course is to be held at all.

Specifically entitled "Kyokushinkai Karate", Lovat's course will be conducted on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 8 to 9:45. There are still openings in the class, so interested students should hussle over to room G-7 of the Currie Gym and register.

REDMAN ON THE SHELF

The title aspirations of the McGill football team received a serious blow this past week in the form of an injury to one of the team's defensive backs, Jim Tryforos. Tryforos, whose consistent performance has rendered him an invaluable member of the Redmen defensive unit, will be out of action for two weeks with a pinched nerve in his neck.

There are several potential replacements for Tryforos. One possibility is that Steve Geoghegan, who was transferred from defence to offence this past week, will play both ways in the next two games. Another possibility revolves around the moving of middle linebacker Phil Roberts to the corner position, with Pete Capobianco filling in for Roberts. Only time will tell.

FOOTBALL ON THE AIR

This coming Saturday's home football game against the Queen's Golden Gaels will mark the return of Radio McGill to the sportscasting business. The student-run station will cover the remaining two home football games as well as a variety of Redmen basketball and hockey games in the upcoming months.

Station manager Gary Kanofsky cites two major factors in the revival of Radio McGill sports coverage. "We want the students to be able to hear the games and we want potential sportscasters to have the opportunity to practice their jobs."

Danny Young, Richard Jablonski and Rob Watt will comprise the three man team covering the football games.
